Re: Docket # 98N-1038

In regard to labeling requirements for commercially-irradiated food, we believe that the FDA should continue to maintain the highest standards of integrity, and to insist that food processors be explicit on labels.

Informing consumers that irradiated food has been "electronically pasteurized", or the use of a similar evasive term, would be considered deliberate suppression of the facts by many people. Please be honest, and if radiation has been used on a product, say so on the label.

Thank you for this opportunity to offer comment.

Very truly yours,
